A collection of Outtakes Volume II

"I have a lot of studio outtakes shoved at the end of shows. Sometimes it's the only outtake I have, other times I have a lot of studio material by an artist. The best part of outtakes, to me, has always been the songs that never surfaced and were never released. This idea works well on dime, since it means that there can be no argument about whether or not the outtake version is the same as the released version.

"Some of these would be debatable as to whether they are demos vs. outtakes; I'm trying to stick to tracks that have more than one instrument accompanying the singer, but that's obviously not a clear way to distinguish an outtake from a demo. This is for your enjoyment, so please don't try to engage me in a discussion of whether a song is a demo or an outtake.

"Some of these songs have circulated for years, others might be new to you. I plan this to be a four volume set. Each one takes awhile, as I have to double check my memory and do a spectral on each one to make sure someone didn't stick me with lossy junk. Hopefully, I can do one per month.

"Dates came from the internet, I did the best I could. The lineage is generally cd-r or cassette (x)." - Lilpanda, Feb 2011
