Unless it's in need of updating (?), the YesSwap FAQ (circa 2003) lists only two circulating SBD recordings from the YesSymphonic tour - one which it says is a different mix of the Amsterdam show featured on the official Symphonic Live, and this date.

Here is the show I downloaded from Dime some time ago. It's yet another one I've lost the original torrent page for, but from the look of it I'm guessing it was uploaded then by the TooleMan personally. All tracks here are stated to be from SBD except the Steve Howe solo pieces Corkscrew and Mood For A Day.

Here is the content of the info file:

This is the only unreleased soundboard recording of the Symphonic tour that I have found. The raw recording favors the orchestra, and the guitar and keyboard parts are hard to hear. The master improves the mix with EQ and dynamics processing.

The original master of this show was done using Sound Forge. The tape I received had tracks Perpetual Change and And You And I in the wrong sequence, and my first master carried this error forward.

My copy of the recording did not include the two Steve Howe solo tracks. The ones I downloaded recently from EZT sound like an audience recording. Forgotten Yesterdays documents a soundboard and an audience recording, but I suspect the Steve Howe tracks are missing from all versions of the soundboard. Nonetheless, I inserted the audience tracks in the 2005 remaster.

The SHN file of disk two, track five (Starship Trooper) was apparently corrupted in the copy of the files torrented on EZT. This torrent resolves all of these problems.
